FIND AN ADVENTURE IN EVERY BOOK WHILE EXPLORING THE HIDDEN TREASURES IN THE DOWNTOWN CORRIDOR ON AN ENJOYABLE URBAN HIKE

In search of a good book? Enjoy the outdoors while touring Downtown Gloversville on an urban hike as the city gives many opportunities for book enthusiasts to find their next reading adventure.

The Groversville Public Library, one of the original Andrew Carnegie libraries, located at 58 E. Fulton St., houses 37,000 stories, books, magazines, graphic novels, newspapers, articles and more for the avid reader. Several book clubs and discussions are also available. To learn more about the Groversville Public Library, visit groversvillelibrary.org.

In addition to the public library, there are eight Little Free Libraries that are tended to by Gloversville Enlarged School District volunteers, five of which are directly in Downtown Gloversville.

Readers can take a book, free of charge to keep or to give back. Whittling down your own home library? Give donations to these boxes for others to read. The goal of Little Free Libraries is to increase access to books for readers of all ages. To learn more about the program, visit www.gesdk12.org/article/746962.

Another Little Free Library is nestled inside the Mohawk Harvest Cooperative Market on Main Street, where there is plenty of space to sit and read, take in a meal and listen to music.

Take the Downtown Gloversville Library Trail as it visits all these book locations.

1. Elk Street Park, located at the corner of Elk and E. Fulton Streets.
2. Groversville Public Library, 58 East Fulton St. NOTE: There is a Little Free Library also at that location.
3. Fremont Community Garden, 110 Fremont Street.
4. Mohawk Harvest (inside), 30 N. Main St.
5. Castiglione Memorial Park at 47 North Main St.
6. Spring Street Park, 139 Spring Street.

Little Free Libraries are also located at these Bonus Stops: Kingsborough Elementary School, 24 West 11th Avenue; Boulevard Elementary School, 56 E. Blvd.; McNab Elementary School 230 W. Fulton St.; and Park Terrace Elementary School, 50 Bloomingdale Ave.
